ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Foremost of all, I would like to thank Dr (Mrs.) Amita Ray, Head of the Department of Archarology, University of Calcutta, for suggesting the topic of my research. I have enjoyed working on it as it opened up new vistas of thought on a subject that has been much discussed in recent years.

To my supervisor, Dr. M.S. Mate, I am immensely grateful for guiding me through a subject, many areas of which often proved complicated for my understanding. His patience and forbearance in this regard overwhelmed me. Besides, he taught me to think originally about many aspects of the style of the illustrations to which certain interpretations are applied by convention.

I thank all the staff of the Deccan College, Pune, who have helped me in one way or another. I also thank the Library staff, particularly, the Librarian Mr. M.K. Kulkarni, who, apart from routine help, permitted to have access to some rare books; Ms. Sushma Deo and Mr. R.V. Gurjar of the Computer Department, Dr. G.L. Badam of the Palaeontology Department, Dr. S.R. Walimbe, and especially Dr. P.S Joshi of the Drawing Department - without whose gracious cooperation regarding the use of their computers I could not have completed my dissertation by the date which I had set for it.
I am much obliged to The American Institute of Indian Studies, Varanasi, especially Mr. R.S. Sharma of the Archives, for supplying me many of the illustrations which I would have found difficult to obtain from some other source. Credits for the particular photographs supplied by this Institute has been given separately. I must separately thank Mr. J.S. Yadav, Librarian of the above named Institute for allowing me to obtain photo-copies of matter from many rare books on art.

I am deeply indebted to Dr. Suresh Vasant for placing his collection of books on art at my disposal, particularly in view of the fact that the Deccan College does not possess specialized books on my subject. Further, he permitted me to use his personal computer which was an added help. I also thank his family for tolerating with good grace my frequent visits to their house to work on the computer, sometimes at odd hours when I certainly must have put them at some inconvenience.

To both Dr. Suresh Vasant and Dr. M.K. Dhavalikar I am obliged for help rendered in many matters concerning my dissertation.

I wish to thank Shri Sunil Jadhav of the Photography Department for helping me in taking photographs of many of the sculptures.

The dissertation was made possible by a Fellowship granted by the Indian Council of Historical Research.
