Acknowledgements

I have incurred many debts since I began working on my PhD. thesis more than five years ago. First, I would like to sincerely thank my supervisor, Prof. Samir Kumar Das, Professor in the Department of Political Science and currently Dean, Faculty of Arts, University of Calcutta for his valuable suggestions and critical comments after going through the entire draft of this research work. This thesis would have been impossible to complete without his active supervision, all round encouragement and constant support during the entire course of this work. I also consider it to be my pleasure to thank Prof. Purusottam Bhattacharya and Prof. Sanjukta Bhattacharya, Professors at the Department of International Relations, Jadavpur University for their constant encouragement during the course of this research work. I am also immensely grateful to Dr. Nandini De Banerjee, Documentation Officer at the Department of International Relations, Jadavpur University for bringing several important references to my notice. Without her very generous support, it would have been difficult to get access to several important references in connection with this research work.

I would further like to thank the library staff of the National Library, Kolkata, Alipore Campus Library and the Central Library of the University of Calcutta for their overall support and cooperation during the entire period of this research work. I shall be failing in my duties if I forget to thank the library staff of the American Information Resource Center Library in Kolkata, the British Council Library in Kolkata, the Jawaharlal Nehru University Central Library and the Institute for Defence Studies and Analysis (IDSA) Library at New Delhi for their generous supply of documents, research materials and bibliographical support.

I also take this opportunity to record my gratitude to my father and sister, who have all provided the much required emotional support during the difficult days of completing this research work. Last, but not the least, I would also like to record my gratitude to my late mother, who still continues to remain as the main source of inspiration for me during the period of this research work and also in every sphere of life. Had she been alive today, she would have been the happiest person to know that I have at last completed this research work. Finally, I take full responsibility for any mistake and omission that may be found in this thesis.
