Acknowledgements

My highest theoretical obligations are due to Professor MN Srinivasa, Professor Irfan Habib and my teacher, Professor BD Chattopadhyaya. I have enormously benefited from the constructive ideas and advice of several intellectuals to whom I am greatly indebted. In retrospect, I acknowledge the debt of my teachers at Vidya Bhawan, Shantiniketan, Vishwa Bharati University, West Bengal, and the Centre for Historical Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi for providing the necessary stimulus which led me into scientific study and research in history. I express my profound gratitude to my research guide, Professor Vijaya Ramaswamy without whose patronage and blessings I wouldn’t have accomplished anything. It was an immensely rewarding experience for me to grow under her compassionate guardianship during which she transformed my ideas on medieval society, oral traditions and gender study. I also thank her for translating and interpreting Tamil inscriptions.

I am grateful to the University Grants Commission and NRCB, Delhi for the grant of Teacher Fellowship (FIP) without which this work would have remained a dream project.

I wish to offer my special thanks to Professor Y Subbarayalu, French Institute of Pondicherry for taking personal interest in my work and strengthening my understanding of the Veḷḷāḷas. Thanks are also due to Professor Pulavar S Raju, Epigraphist, Erode from whom I obtained a great deal of information on the Kongu Veḷḷāḷas. I owe a debt to Professor Irfan Habib, Aligarh Muslim University for his insightful observation and advice on the Jāts and Meos. I would specially like to thank the CHS faculty, particularly Professor Dilbagh Singh, Professor Kumkum Roy, Professor Kunal Chakraborty and Professor Ranbir Chakraborty whose suggestions have been invaluable. I also thank Dr Jyoti Atwal for friendly advice. Professor Imaid Zaidi and Professor Sunita Zaidi, Jamia Millia Islamia were much helpful in broadening my perspective on essentials of Jāt history. I am grateful to Dr Surajbhan Bhardwaj, Motilal College, Delhi for his suggestions and help in translation of Meo records.

My incidental association with some Tamil scholars particularly, Dr T Mahalingam and Dr T Ilangoovan, Coimbatore, Dr C Maheshwaran, Erode and Dr NR Chenniappan, Perur yielded unexpected beneficial results for my study. Thanks to all of them. Besides, the priest of the Perur temple also helped me in identifying Tamil inscriptions on the walls of the main shrine. I owe a special debt to my friend, Dr S Gunasekharan, New Delhi for enlightening my work with his knowledge of Kongu state and society; to Dr N Govindaraju, Chennai for his generous help in locating Tamil scholars and institutions; and to Dr Senthur Pandian, Coimbatore for his timely assistance. I am grateful to Professor RS Aggarwal, Dr Sudhir Kumar, Dr Yashvir Singh, Dr Vijayalakshmi, Dr Udaivir Singh, Dr Geeta Sharma and Dr Anil Tripathi for their useful suggestions on the Jāts. I also wish to thank Sri Shivdhan Singh, Dr Mahak Singh, Dr Ranvir Singh and Dr Devraj Jat for their sharp observations on Jāt origins and identity.

Much gratitude is also owed to Dr S Balaji, CCF, Chennai and Mr Anil Kumar Malik, Indian Railways, Hyderabad for their suggestions and kindness during my field-trip to South India. I also wish to thank the Secretary, Principal, teachers and staff of my college for their support during my study leave. I am grateful to Professor Shashikant, Dr KC Jain, Dr
AP Rastogi, Dr VP Singh, Dr Harendra Malik, Dr Sudhir Pratap Singh and Dr Rajiv Teotia for extending all kinds of necessary help. Very special thanks to Dr Subhash Malik and Dr Anil Kumar Choudhary for their consistent support during this period. I also acknowledge my debts to Dr C Krishnan, Science Journalist, New Delhi, his little son, Ram and Srimati Sethu Ramaswamy for their exceptional support and kind-heartedness flavoured with endless cups of coffee and South Indian delicacies. For their helpful gestures and unstinted support, I thank my friends—Laxman, Abhay, Sohaib, Nandkishore, Ajay, Leela, S Mahalingam, Suresh and Rajesh Sinha. I also thank Sri Dharamveer Singh, Sri RP Singh, Dr Sushila, Dr Pooja Malik, Mr Charu Chauhan, Mrs Kavita, and Sanjay Singh Jr for their concern and encouragement. My trusted friend, Rajesh Sharma deserves special mention for sharing my troubles and offering hospitality and entertainment at Chennai. I also wish to thank Sri Matriprasad, Pondicherry for arranging a wonderful trip to Auroville which brought enormous peace of mind and inner strength. At this stage I cannot forget to acknowledge abundant love and co-operation received from hundreds of on-field farmers belonging to the Jat, Meo and Veljâla communities.

For providing research facilities and study material, I thank the staff of the following libraries and research institutions: Central Library, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi; DSA Library (CHS), JNU, New Delhi; ICHR Library, New Delhi; Nehru Memorial Library, Teenmurthy, New Delhi; Library of Surajmal Education Society, New Delhi; Central Library, Aligarh Muslim Univesity, Aligarh; Institute of Advanced Studies, AMU, Aligarh; Library of Anthropological Survey of India, Dehradoon; Salar Jang Museum Library, Hyderabad; Central Library, Osmania University, Hyderabad; Madras University Library, Chennai; Tamilnadu Archives and its Library, Chennai; Library of Department of Archaeology, Chennai; Connemara Library, Chennai; Oriental Manuscript Library, Chennai; Central Library, Ch. Charan Singh University, Meerut; and Digambar Jain PG College Library, Baraut.

I have no words sufficient to convey my heartfelt gratitude to my loving parents, Sri Narendra Singh and Smt Rashmi Singh for every conceivable encouragement and blessing. I also thank my father for going through the drafts of each chapter with meticulous care and pointing out my strengths and weaknesses. I express my gratitude to Sri PK Chawdhry, Chief Conservator of Forest, Bhopal from whom I have always received tremendous love, support and guidance. I thank my brothers, my twin pillars of strength, Amal Kumar and Sanjay Choudhary, for always being considerate and supportive at every stage of my life. I also owe a very special thank to my caring sister, Vinita Singh Chawdhry for shielding me in all kinds of adverse situations. I owe a special debt to Renu, Seema, Ashir, Vibhu, Arunima, Aditi and my aunt, Smt Premvati Devi for backing me in my most trying periods. Thanks are also due to Dheerendra, Pravin, Rinku, Rekha, Vandana and my mother-in-law, Smt Kaushalya Malik, for their helpful gestures. I personally thank my wife, Madhu for showing genuine concern for my long-pending research and finally bringing it to fruition. Also, sweet thanks to my little daughter, Pranjilee for enriching my work with her joys and wonder.

Before I end, I humbly acknowledge my extreme indebtedness to my loving patron saint, ACHARYA ABHAYA DEVJI of Charthawal, who christened me in my childhood and gave me a new identity.
