ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

There are number of people whom I would like to thank for their guidance, encouragement, and invaluable support. First my mentor and Guide, Dr. Vanita Patwardhan, contributed in this project in numerous ways. She was helpful in the design and writing of the study and more so she inspired me to think about research in new ways challenging and encouraging me to achieve my potential. I greatly appreciate her dedication and untiring guidance related to my study.

The other members of my committee each significantly contributed to this work. Dr. Sujala Wavve, Dr. Meenakshi Gokhale, Mrs. Sucharita Gadre were always helpful regarding any issues involved related to work. I would like to thank Dr. Bharati Rajguru, for the encouragement and motivation which she gave me for completing the task. I am thankful to entire committee for making this project an enjoyable learning experience.

I would like to convey my thanks Dr. Sharad Gore, Head of the Statistics Department, Pune University, for his guidance regarding the data analysis and statistics. I am thankful to Dr. Shejwal, Head of the Psychology Department, Pune University. His contribution and guidance in completion of this study was very much valuable.

I wish to thanks my teacher and Head of the Department of Applied Psychology, Mumbai University, Dr. Anuradha Sovani, for her help in the study.

I would like to take this opportunity to offer the bunch of thanks to all Doctors, Psychologists and counselors who involved in this project and helped me for providing the cases for data-collection phases. And last, but important all students and their parents and teachers who gave there valuable time and helped me in my study.

I would like to thank for my dearest husband for his support and co-operation, without him this theses would not have been completed. The germ for doctoral research came to my mind this had always been my ultimate aim. The arrival of my wonderful daughter during the research period distracted me from my studies more than I realized. But her smiles have always energized me during my study. My parents, in-laws and my friends co-operated me in numerous ways. Their support, guidance and blessings could only take me on the path of success in the completion of thesis.
