ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

All praise and thanks are to Allah for His blessings that have given me strength to complete this thesis.

I owe sincere thanks to my revered supervisor Professor Kaniz Khwaja Ahmed for her unstinted support, timely advice and keen interest in guiding this study. Her deep knowledge on Modern Drama inspired me to take up this aspect of Literature and she provided deep insights into every facet of Beckett’s drama. Her intellectual suggestions and astute guidance were of a great help while writing this thesis. Her ability to probe beneath the text is a true gift, and her insights have strengthened this study significantly. The research process became a meaningful, rewarding and enriching experience with her patient and keen guidance and meticulous corrections.

I express my gratitude to the Chairperson, Professor Seemin Hasan, and all the faculty members of the Department of English for their support and encouragement for ushering me into world of English Literature. Under their aegis, I have reached this level. I am also thankful to the staff of the department and specially to Mr. Suhail Ishaq for his technical assistance.

I am indebted to Dr Haris Qadeer, Dr Shahnaz Shabbir, Dr Asfia Khan and Ms Elham Fatima for their support and encouragement which has time and again helped me in focussing upon my work. I convey special acknowledgement to all my friends who helped me to overcome setbacks and stay focused. Uncountable thanks to Saquib, Ghausia, Aisha, Sania, Sandip, Shilpa, Sandeep, Fatima, Rehbar and Zainab for their unwavering support and motivation at every stage of my study.

I am sincerely beholden to Peer Mohammad Ashraf who has provided the necessary motivation and without his invaluable help this work would not have been completed. I am also thankful to Mr. Afzal Sayeed for his support during the compilation of this thesis.

I would also like to thank my uncle Mr. Anwar Abbas Naqvi whose constant motivation led me to complete my Ph.D. It was his support and confidence due to which I was able to undertake research. I also accredit my sincere thanks to my uncle
Prof. Afroz Taj and Mr. John Caldwell for providing me valuable reading materials during the course of study. Further, their insightful discussion led me to look upon the plays of Beckett from different perspective.

I cannot thank my mother enough for her warm and caring nature, and for putting up with my erratic schedule and uncertain temperament with a loving smile. She took care of all my other responsibilities and gave me uninterrupted hours of study to wind up my thesis. No words will suffice to explain my sincere gratitude towards my father-in-law and mother-in-law for their unending support and bearing with my absence from home frequently during the course of this study. I want to extend my deepest gratitude and genuine thanks to my brother Mr. Khalid N. Khan and my sister Shazia Naqvi who has always showered me with their love and affection which gave me immense strength to strive hard against difficulties.

Last but not the least, I must especially mention the name of my husband, Sohel whose novel ideas and sound advice have been a source of inspiration to me. His unflinching support has been unconditional all these years that enabled me to bypass the more persistent obstacles to thesis completion.

Finally I sincerely acknowledge my late father who guided me to pursue PhD. The research process started in his presence but it ends in his absence. His foresight and values paved the way for a privileged education. And lastly a special mention of Aani Fatimah, a little baby whose presence was for a short span of time that changed my perception towards the idea of existence.

SYEDA BEENISH NAQVI