Every special child who is in need of a means and an opportunity to communicate!
ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Undertaking a research study has been a challenging and enlightening journey. Unlike common belief this journey has been multifaceted involving numerous people without whose participation and involvement it would have been only an idea. Therefore I am greatly indebted to each one of them who have made my research journey possible, meaningful and fruitful.

Being at a right place at the right time are critical to success. This can be only facilitated by the God Almighty who has been instrumental in me undertaking the research work and providing the directions and support for it during each step of the way. My humble submissions to GOD for being the enabler!

I owe my gratitude to my guide Dr. (Mrs.) Rubina Lal who invested her trust in me and helped me visualize the research process. She has been a true facilitator and guide who steered my thought processes and at the same time ensured that I worked independently to uphold the true values of research. Her in depth knowledge, thinking and unassuming style will always be an inspiration to me.

The process of developing a training manual is a collaborative exercise involving the efforts and participation of many people. This thesis would not have been possible without the open ended support of the principals and staff of special schools who believed in the objectives of this research and provided the mental and physical supports required to conduct the study in their premises.

Successful completion of every research reflects the support and commitment of participant subjects. The enthusiasm of caregivers in learning and implementing were the turning points for this study. The children with developmental disabilities who participated in this study were a constant source of inspiration. My heartfelt thanks to each one of them for their participation and consent to be part of the study and permit use of their photographs for this research study.

My sincere thanks to Dr.Rubina Lal for giving the consent to use the Makaton signing system (Indian adaptation) for this study.
A special thanks to the senior speech therapist colleagues for their valuable inputs during the pilot phase of the study.

I am grateful to Prof J.C.Sharma for his guidance and inputs in statistical analysis of the data.

I would like to thank a group of people at my place of work, Dr .S.R Chandrasekhar institute of Speech & Hearing Bangalore including the patron in chief, chairman, director and my colleagues for their unflinching support during the course of the study.

My dear friends Geetha, Natarajan and Aradhana who were always there for me when I wanted to think aloud and help me in my personal journey. I will always cherish your support and friendship, which helped me through my study.

My father who is a storehouse of energy, enthusiasm and perseveration has always inspired me to think and conquer the impossible and constantly exuded positive energy in me…to him and my mother I owe what I am today as a person…

My husband who is an epitome of patience, understanding and support is a friend, guide and a teacher who knows me more than I do about myself. He has helped me analyze and understand the intricacies in any process, been an unconditional listener at all times and a pillar of strength through stressful times.

The pulse of my life my children Siddharth and Sahana who by their sense of understanding and perception have always amazed me and have in fact encouraged and driven me to focus on my study when I could have been easily carried away by the daily chores of life…

My athai, brothers, sisters and mother in law who have been silent workers and supported me when I was juggling between work, home and study. I am indeed fortunate to have such a wonderful family!

I am indebted to every person who directly or indirectly has played a role in supporting the study.
