

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Writing acknowledgement is perhaps the greatest joy and most exciting moment to any person on the threshold of submitting his thesis. In the course of working on the study, I have benefited enormously from various people who shaped my thoughts, guided my action and mostly encouraged me in no small manner.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my supervisor, Dr. Alka Acharya for her consistent guidance, unfailing encouragement and infinite patience. I am forever indebted to her for years of support, in both academic and non-academic matters. I cannot think of many people who would have adjusted to my erratic time schedule, with a deep understanding of my personal problems, which she accommodated by being extremely flexible. I remember with extreme gratitude the 10:30 p.m. rendezvous when she handed back draft after draft on my thankfully 'mutilated' and recorrected chapters. There is no way I can thank her enough for standing by me in all most every situation including writing the second edition of this thesis. All I can say is Thank you and just wish all the people in the world are as nice as you.

I am thankful to Prof. R.R. Krishnan, Chairperson, Centre for East Asia Studies, for all his support. My sincere thanks to Prof. G.P. Deshpande, Dr. Madhu Balla, Dr. Vara Prasad for their support. I also thank Dr. Lalima Varma for all the help.

I would like to thank Dr. Henry Wai Chung Yung of National University of Singapore for the time he spent with me during my fieldwork in Singapore. I am greatly indebted to him for all the words of encouragement and direction.

My work would have been incomplete if not for the crucial information and inputs provided by Dr. Geoff Wade of Centre for Asian Studies of Hong Kong University. I also thank Radha Mishra, Melissa G. Carthy, of the Asian Studies Institute. I thank Rajesh for taking care of my stay in Hongkong.

There are many people who were a source of inspirations in completing the work. Kanchan Lal who stayed opposite to me in Jhelum Hostel showed that consistency in purpose was an essential ingredient for success. I learnt the fine art of footnoting from him. Meeting Munindra Singh was serendipity. He rekindled the academic interest in me and showed me that nothing can compensate true learning. He became a philosopher and a friend and being with him was sheer pleasure.

There were many fellow travelers who were constant companions. Munmun the enlightened one was kind enough to give the baton in the form of a list of articles on globalization which was the starting point for this thesis. Zarin Ahmed with her evergreen optimism, Godson with his practicality, provided constant support. Shekar with his never say die attitude was a great person to be with and I benefited enormously from his practical words of wisdom. Words cannot express the role of Nimanthi. I am really thankful to her for all the help she provided in seeing me through this difficult period. Rajesh (Munger) was generous with his time and computer. He allowed me to use his 'magic machine' at all times and I am really grateful to him for all the support. Neelu brought me close to home and shared affection in large manner. Rohan and Lakshmi provided the warmth and a cheer of companionship. Room No. 21, Kaveri Hostel was the place I loved going to. Bryan Ryan, the 'president' from Kanyakumari with infectious warmth, Zaheer Abbas with his political Philosophy, Toy with his beautiful smile, Avik with his out of the world lifestyle, Anannya and K.B. with their youthfulness, Mukesh with his silence was a pleasure to be with. Ravi Prasad was the Chinese expert I always turn to. My thanks go to Ranjita, Sadhanand, for all the support.

While writing the second edition of this thesis, there are many people to thank for. Since my bachelorhood had given way to the status of 'happily married' it is to my wife Gigi that I owe a lot for encouraging me to finish the last lap of this marathon. Rohan Sinha was generous with his room and time and took a philosophical view of this marathon which gave me something to think about. Sithara provided both breakfast and books which helped me enlarge my horizons and gave food for thought. I am thankful to him for taking me back to my own good old days in terms of memories. Srin, the radical sophists and Arun Rag was more than helpful in helping me with the nuances of computer operation. More than anything else all thanks to this wonderful campus which provided freedom and warmth which fast disappearing from the world outside.

Last but not least to my mother who loved me so much to let me so much to let me go. For her this thesis does not mean anything, but I mean everything.

P.A. Mathew
