Acknowledgements

Completing my PhD degree is probably the most challenging activity of the first 38 years of my life. The best and worst moments of my doctoral journey have been shared with many people. It has been a great privilege to spend several years in the Department of English at Swami Ramanand Teerth Marathwada University, Nanded (Maharashtra) and its members will always remain dear to me.

My first debt of gratitude must go to my advisor, Dr. B. S. Jadhav, Associate Professor, Department of English, School of Language, Literature and Culture Studies, Swami Ramanand Teerth Marathwada University. He patiently provided the vision, encouragement and advice necessary for me to proceed through the doctoral program and complete my thesis. I want to thank him for his unflagging encouragement and serving as a role model to me as a junior member of academia. He has been a strong and supportive adviser to me throughout my graduate school of English Literature, but he has always given me great freedom to pursue independent work.
I specially thank my family, my mother, my brothers—Mohammed Qasem and Nasser Qasem, my wife and my children and my sister and her sons for their support, patience, love, prayers and helpful suggestions. They have served me well. I am also thankful to the God (Allah) for my life through all tests in the past four years. You have made my life more bountiful. May your name be exalted, honored, and glorified. I would like to thank my friends—Nabeel Al-Somaiti, Salem ALkhader, Mohammed ALbadri, and ALkhader Adlki for their ongoing assistance whenever I needed them.

Last but not the least I would like to express my loving appreciation to the Yemeni Government for providing me a scholarship to complete my research work in India. During my research, I have received help from several people one way or the other. It may not be possible to mention all the names and acknowledge my gratitude towards them. However, I shall always be grateful to all of them. I end these dry words of appreciation with a deep sense of gratitude and obligation, and with a hope to reciprocate in due thesis.
