I am deeply indebted to all the men and specially women who made me understand what education is, how to move beyond trappings of literacy, and even when being deprived of the dominant power discourse, remain fulfilled, giving and grounded, special mention should be made of my mother, and Hamida Bano, an octogenarian, whom I had interviewed in Patna and who had written her autobiography in her seventies despite limited education she had received in her childhood only, and many other influences who in my direct interaction or otherwise shaped my ideas on larger perspective of life.

I express my deep gratitude to Professor Mridula Mukherjee, my supervisor as she introduced me to the different sets of questions in life, like never to rush anything at the last moment (which I am addicted to, almost), always be prepared and keep yourself updated in your relevant field, choosing between necessary or otherwise, throughout my association with her she stood like a rock behind me, being extremely sensitive to the academic or otherwise life of a research scholar who is a mother and a wife also. The discomfort caused during the last phase of the completion of this thesis to my teacher and guide is regretted, and my sincere thanks to her for keen editing and ‘surgery’ of the thesis, due to which, I was able to learn a lot. Thanks Madam, for everything.

My gratitude goes to Professor S. Bhattacharya, my ex-supervisor for providing me enough space, the valuable suggestions and moral support whenever required in the beginning of this project, who also taught me to frame questions, he always told this to be the most important aspect of research. One can learn a lot about punctuality, excellent sense of humor and a sense of responsibility from him.

My special thanks goes to Prof. Hetuker Jha, (retd. Sociology Professor, Patna University, for providing me the relevant material and affection shown by both, him and Mrs. Jha, during my field trips to Patna, Prof. Surendra Gopal, Dr. Vishalakshi Menon for her immense timely help, editing and concern, my father for his keen interest in material collection, Prof. Karuna Chanana, Prof. Deepak Kumar, Mrs. Sabyasachi Bhattacharya, for the affection during her stay in the campus, Prof. Sucheta Mahajan for her affection, support and advices, Mahalakshmi Madam for her friendly attitude, Prof. Aditya Mukherjee for his support at the time of last minute crisis. Thanks, Shashi madam and Dharmendra bhaiya for keeping my going easier at the centre.

Among my friends, Lata who always had faith in me that I could do it despite several limitations of my life, she always remained a patient shoulder, a maid provider, and what not. Thanks, Lata. Sayeed, Khurram, Aparna, Chhaya, Baby, Manisha, Somitra, Sudip, thanks to you all. All the kids Diksha, Akshar, Anna, Madhavi, Rama, Vishnu, I will try to compensate.

Again I would like to thank the entire JNU community, UGC Fellowship, Mahanadi, Prof. V.K. Jain, for their vital assistance during my stay in the campus, and this journey which, otherwise would have become difficult. Pankaj always tried to do his best as a father and a husband, also tried to share the stress and at last contributed to the thesis also, by doing some amount of translation in the glossary section, hence this thanks.
I am indebted to the authorities and staff members of Bihar State Archives, Patna, Sister Carol, Sister Lucile, Sister Matilda for providing me materials and taking my work seriously and enthusiastically, also to the staff members of N.M.M.L., New Delhi, ICHR, Delhi, Central Secretariat Library as well as numerous individuals for their help in providing me access to important books and materials needed for the purpose.

Lastly, my deep gratitude to my native land which always attracted me to take it up as a topic of research, due to its vivacity and extremities, that is, “Bihar” and to all the persons who cheered me up during the difficult days I went through while completing this work, due to motherhood.

The errors are solely mine.
