ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis emerges from the experience I had during my stay with my father at the St. John Medical College and Hospital, Bangalore. My warmest thanks to Dr. Narender M., Dr. Abha Rani Kujur for saving my father’s life who had to go for a hand amputation after a major surgery. Dr. Narender M. helped me in understanding various clinical apparatus of pain in Plastic Reconstructive Surgery Burns. I also thank Dr. Vijay Joseph, Dr. Robert Anthony, Dr. Kaushik, and Dr. Sunderraj Ellur for their help and care. I thank Professor Lakshmi Chandra—who was not my supervisor, then—for helping me in that painful state.

My supervisor Professor Lakshmi Chandra has been a constant support. My gratitude to her remains undivided. I thank her for everything she did for my Ph.D. and outside of it.

Some people have directly engaged in the discussion of the topic, given me stimulus and advice. I owe debts to them: Professor Prakash Kona, Professor Michael Marder, Professor Rajiv C. Krishnan, Professor Udaya Kumar, Professor Dilip Naik, Dr. Nalini Persram, Dr. Jibu Mathew George, Dr. Mohsin Khan, Dr. Shreesha Udupa, Mr. Pradeep Chandra Kumar, Dr Upamanyu Sengupta, Miss Nandini Pradeep, and Mr Danish Iqbal. However, I accept the responsibility, if somewhere I am wrong, for the thoughts I have expressed are mine.

I owe debts to Professor John Varghese whose intelligence, appreciation, and good spirit were always most treasured. I am grateful to Professor Dilip K Das for the fruitful discussions. I am indebted to Professor Venkat Rao for his support and encouragement. I owe debts to Professor A V Ashok for his encouragement and love. I am also grateful to Professor Chanchala K. Naik, Professor Anand Mahanand, Dr. Md. Sayeed Ayub Siddiqui, and Professor Shruti Sircar who showed concerned attention for the final submission of the thesis. I owe debts to Professor M. E. Veda Sharan for his suggestions and constant interest on my topic. Special thanks are due to Dr. Nandini Ramesh Sankar.

The present Vice Chancellor Professor E. Suresh Kumar, and the former Vice Chancellor Professor Sunaina Singh have been encouraging in their support whenever I approached them regarding my research. I thank Professor Aliz Raza Moosvi for all his support and love during his tenure. I am also grateful to Professor K. Padmini Shanker for her support.

I am indebted to: Dr. Sheba Victor, Professor Sayeed A Sayeed, Professor T Nageswara Rao, Professor T. Samson, Professor Sonba M. Salve, Professor Amith Kumar, Mr. V Rajshekar, Dr. Shyam Rao Rathod, Dr. Sreedharan T., Professor Kishore Kumar, Dr. Leena Mukhopadhya, Professor Surabhi Bharati, Professor Muzaffar Alam, Dr. Sharda Muni, Dr. Kshema Jose, and Professor Venukapalli Sudhakar.

I owe a lot for what I have learned from all my teachers at Aligarh Muslim University.

My warmest thanks to the faculty of English, TU Dresden, Germany. I presented a part of this study at Dresden in July 2016. I also wish to thank the Dean, International Students, EFLU, and DAAD, Germany, and the staff of the Account Section at EFLU for the exchange programme in Germany.

I would like to thankfully acknowledge the Ministry of Minority Affairs for the Maulana Azad National Fellowship.

I owe a special debt of gratitude to the all the staff at the Ramesh Mohan Library, EFLU; at the OUCIP, Osmania University. It is difficult to stay in a University space without the love and care of the non-teaching staffs who became a part of my everyday life. Special thanks are due to Mrs. B. Lalitha, Mr. G Praveen Kumar, Mr. D Sampath, and Mrs. G K Sreelatha. My warmest thanks to Mr. A Sathaiah for his support and love.

I think this work would not have been possible without the support, help, love, and care my friends. They are many. So, I dedicate this work to all of them. I am sure all my friends know where they belong in my life. All my friends help me in every possible way to come out from the pain I go through in my everyday life. I have learned what is to be human from them.

My warmest thanks to Kona Agnes Reddy and her family for an extended love and care.

I am grateful to Roy-Family for all kinds of support and help they provided me.

I am grateful to Professor M. Sujatha and her family for all the support and love.

Special thanks are due to the family members and relatives.
