Acknowledgements

Completing Ph.D. and thesis has been an incredible experience to me and writing this particular section of the thesis is indeed overwhelming as I got into reminiscing all the ups and downs though the course of this journey. As I am flipping through the pages of this thesis, I feel blessed to have traveled through this period of my life with many people without whom this dissertation would be virtually impossible. The past years have been an amalgamation of achievements, celebrations, ‘eureka moments’, setbacks, struggle to meet deadlines, a “bittersweet” symphony to sum it all.

I most sincerely and wholeheartedly extend my gratitude to my guide Professor Shridhar P. Gejji for his trust and support through all these years. I thank him for advising me during all phases of my Ph.D., but also for giving me the freedom to find my way in a project and superabundant support without which I would not be holding this dissertation in my hands. Moreover, I am deeply indebted to him for teaching me how to effectively communicate the research results and most importantly for his confidence in me when I doubted myself.

Besides my advisor, I would like to thank Professor Rajeev Pathak of Department of Physics, for his insightful comments, encouragement and for being a constant source of inspiration.

While pursuing Ph.D. and writing a dissertation is one of the most isolating (socially) activities imaginable, I was never truly alone. Life would not have been as colorful without the many good friends I met here in the university. No words can reveal how much I am indebted to them. My dear Swarada, Dipali, Prakash, Sulakshana, Sivasudan, Manisha and Nalini for being there. The joy of bonding and striving together to achieve our goals, unplanned treats, tea and snack breaks during all these years is something worth remembering. I am thankful to Dipali for helping me out from time to time both in academics as well as in personal front. Thanks Nalini for being one of the best roommates that I could ever ask for. The endless “philosophical” conversations, cooking sessions followed by watching episodes of ‘The Big Bang theory’, reading poetries, painting and all the fun moments, which I thoroughly enjoyed and will cherish forever.

I am tremendously thankful to my parents who patiently waited all these years for me to complete my Ph.D. without any complaints. Without their love and support I could have never been able to finish this task. I am especially appreciative of my sister Shweta’s willingness to be there for me even during the times when I was most crazy.

Patience is something that everyone has in scarce. To the most patient man that I have ever seen in my life, to have tolerated the oscillations of my mood swings and still being there for me. He lived with me throughout this process and bore the brunt of my exhaustions, confusions, and all my frustrations while at the same time providing lot of support and encouragement over all these years. I never have said a word of thanks or sorry to him or to Shweta so far and I find it “odd” to say the same now as well.

As I look back on my life, I realize that every time I thought I was being rejected from something good, I was actually being re-directed to something better. God has always provided the best for me. Thanks to him for always guiding me through all the trials and tribulations while at the same time for providing me with ample of opportunities to smile and rejoice each and every day. In the end with what I have been bestowed upon by him (God) all I can say to him is that “My imperfections and failures are as much a blessing from you as my successes and my talents, I lay them both at your feet.”

Soniya