ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This dissertation is the fruit of a long journey that started in 2010. Through these years, my understanding of research has been enriched and my intellectual horizons broadened. This dissertation is primarily due to the many challenges and rigour that I have been subjected to at Anna University, Chennai. I acknowledge the contributions of many individuals, whose unparalleled support and constructive criticism made this work possible.

I sincerely thank my supervisor Dr. M.V. Subha whom I have known since my collegiate days. I thank her for accepting me as a Ph.D., candidate. As a teacher during my formative days of management education and as a guide during my research journey, her Socratic approach helped me gain a better understanding of academic research. A teacher once and a teacher forever, she continues to be a source of inspiration and encouragement for me. My decision to embrace teaching as a profession, is largely due to the awe inspiring lectures by my guide during my collegiate days.

I express my gratitude to the members of my Doctoral Committee, Dr. T. Bina and Dr. T. Saleendran. As academicians and researchers in their own right, their insights and critical eye ensured that I stayed on course with my research questions. I deem it an honour to have them on my doctoral committee.

I am grateful to my parents, spouse and colleagues for their support.

VISHAL KUMAR R