ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

A thesis is a collective effort of many individuals and not a solo achievement. Therefore, I take this opportunity with much pleasure to express my deep gratitude to all the people who have helped me through the course of my journey towards producing this thesis. I would like to begin with thanking my supervisor, Dr. Syed Ajmal Pasha, for his sincere review of my work and insightful comments. The discussions and deliberations which we had, were always informative and helped me to further hone my research topic.

I would like to thank Prof M.V. Nadkarni for his constant supervision and for having belief in me. Prof Nadkarni has been the most thoughtful and supportive doctoral member that one could ask for. I truly owe him a lot, for all the liberties, ever-ready appraisal of my work at every moment I knocked on his door, his attention to detail and for the amount of work he has put into this thesis. Apart from the subject of my research, I learnt a lot from him, which I am sure, will be useful in different stages of my life. He has been a source of inspiration to me and a delight to work with.

I would also like to express my gratitude to Prof R. S. Deshpande for the illuminating discussions and encouraging words to me. His constructive criticisms and a keen eye have helped me to rectify my omissions. Special thanks to Prof. M. G. Chandrakanth, Prof M. K. Ramesh and Ms. B.P.Vani for helping me and pointing me out shortcomings, if any, during doctoral committee meetings and bi-annual seminars.

I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude for the faculty at Institute for Social and Economic Change (ISEC), who have positively shaped my academic engagement. Thanks are also due to the administrative and library staff at ISEC for their innumerous help. A special note of appreciation for Ms. Vimala for her kind and selfless gestures and who went out of the way to help me in all the paperworks needed during the course of my study, Mr. Chand for helping me getting my datas and articles on time, Ms. Swetha and Mr. Mohan for always lending a hand to help me in the time of need and to Ms. Mohana who was always kind enough to assist me in all possible ways.

I affectionately acknowledge and remain indebted to my teachers Prof. Bhabesh Sen and Prof. Raj Kishore Panda of Utkal University and especially to Prof. K.
Pushpangadan of Centre for Development Studies, who have been the reason behind me achieving the present status. My sincere gratitude also goes to all those who have taught and enlightened me through the years.

I am grateful to my two supporting pillars – Kiran and Sudipta and especially Kiran for reading my thesis meticulously and indicating presence of oversight, if any. I would also like to thank my friends Jyoti, Shikha, Swetha, Rajat, Azhar and Vishnu for their assistance, critical assessment of my work and useful insights and with whom I share tons of fond memories.

I would also love to acknowledge the support and encouragement received from my friends, Mahesh, Vinayak and Rajesh in countless ways. Finally, this thesis would not have been possible without the confidence, endurance and support of my family. My family has always been a source of inspiration and motivation to me. I wish to thank my Maa and Bapi and especially Bapi, who has always forced me to look beyond the horizon and whose love, support and erudite counsel have brought me this far. I wish to thank my mentors, my dear Pisamosai and Thakhumaa, whose evaluation and continuous prodding to better my old self, has made me the better person that I am today. Their presence is always missed. I am sincerely indebted to my Pisimoni, Guruji, Shikhumaa, Mejka, Mamee, Namama, Mamuni, Bhudeb Kaku, Masimoni, Habu Mama, Didi, Jiju, Sreejita, Shreyansh and Amit and especially my dear brother Seshadri, for their boundless love, understanding and patience.

The last lines are reserved for the most special person – Subbu. I would like to thank him for the unconditional love, unfaltering strength and support in every step of my doctoral life and otherwise.

Omissions are not deliberate and are sincerely regretted.
