ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

“Piglet noticed that even though he had a Very Small Heart, it could hold a rather large amount of Gratitude.”

― A.A. Milne (Winnie-the-Pooh)

To my teachers:

I wish to convey my deep gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. Jibu Mathew George whose scholarship, immense patience and sense of clarity and perfection provided the basis of my doctoral thesis. My sincere and heartfelt gratitude to him for being supportive at each and every stage of my research and the guidance with which I could finish my thesis.

I wish to convey my sincere thanks to my advisory committee, Dr Prakash Kona and Dr Amith Kumar who helped me during the initial stages of the formulation of the thesis statement with their insight and advice whenever required. Their course titled “Postmodernism” helped me in finding direction after completing my masters.

A special thank you to the staff at Ramesh Mohan Library, EFLU and the OUCIP Library, Hyderabad.

I would also like to thank the faculty members of the Department of Indian and World Literatures, specially Professor Rama Devi and Professor T. Nageshwar Rao whose help and support throughout these years have been of immense help.

To my family and friends:

To Baba and Maa, to call you the best parents would be a cliché. But a cliché is a cliché for the right reasons. Saying a simple thank you would not encompass the deluge of emotions that I am feeling at this moment. I will never be old enough to be anything but your “maman” but “maman’ is old enough to say a simple thank you to both of you. You have been my pillars of strength and positivity and you have shown me how to live and achieve my dreams. To Dida and Dadu, for not only believing that I could achieve anything that I wished for but for focusing on my education and upbringing. You are the real rockstars of my life. To Nitu Mashi, who made my stay in Hyderabad the best seven years of my life. Your love, support and guidance throughout this journey has been the flashpoint of my stay in this new city.

To Debo, Dipsy and Neil. My life would not be complete without you guys. For you, a thousand times over… To Mango and Niev, for our twin journeys in to the unknown and in finding strength in each other and in the written word. To Arpita, for being the best friend and Biplab for the continuous support and calls. To Mitu and Devu for endless cups of coffee and chai, online and offline. To Kobita and Samba, for reminding me that home is just a call away.

To Achu, Aby, Upa and Phong, for providing with that oft needed comic relief. To Riju, for being a revelation, my bookstagram buddy and a friend for life. To Teja, Manisha, Diksha, Sulfia, and Sindhu for being there in times of need, for all the love and support. To Ano and Toni for being a home away for home. To my PhD classmates who are more than just classmates, to Gargi, Suman, Sankar and Geethu for being the perfect partners in this journey. To Ann, Afzal, Ajith and Vishnu for endless sessions of food, banter, coffee and music respectively. To Pratheesh, for believing that this ship will never sink. Never.

To the miscellaneous rulers of the universe:

To all the great composers of the world without whose music this thesis would not follow half of the lucidity it does currently. To Ludovico Einaudi, Howard Shore and Ramin Dwajadi for Primavera, LOTR soundtrack and Winds of Winter soundtrack respectively.

To Kurt Vonnegut. So it goes.
