The study will lead researchers to discover more medicinal plants which have the capability to eliminate oral diseases by reducing the biofilm formation. The study will help the researchers to develop plant-based oral mouthwashes which can be used as an alternate agent to control the biofilm formation without any side effects and damage to the epithelial tissue of the oral cavity. To elevate oral sanitation, medicinal plant-based mouthwash can be used as a mediator and can act as a part of efficient home care medication.