ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work would not have been possible without the guidance and support of many and I find it most pleasant to remember and record my obligations to them:

I express my deep sense of gratitude to my mentor, Dr. V.K. Srivastava, Head, Department of Statistics, P.P.N. College, Kanpur for valuable help rendered during the tenure of the entire work.

I am extremely grateful to Prof. Kuldeep Kumar, Indian Institute of Management, Lucknow for inspiring me to work on this problem, by his sagacious and incessant discussions as well as benevolent guidance, creating ability of independent thinking throughout the present work, in spite of his foreign assignment in Singapore.

Vocabulary fails me express adequately my humble gratefulness to Sri. S.K. Mandal, Scientist-cum-Assistant Director, Biometry and Statistics Division, C.D.R.I., Lucknow, who encouraged me to complete this thesis quickly and rendered every help to me from planning stage to the end of work. He guided me like his younger brother. His all time encouragement, valuable discussions and affectionate behaviour brought my research efforts to the success of this dissertation.

It gives me immense pleasure to thank Prof. V.K. Srivastava, Head, Department of Mathematics and Incharge Computer Centre, G.B. Pant University, Panthnagar, and Dr. R.K. Singh, Reader, Department of Statistics, Lucknow University, for their interest, willing assistance and encouragement at all stages of this work.
Words would be inadequate to express my sincere thankfulness to Dr. R.K. Sharma, Sri. M.P.S. Negi and Smt. Bishun Dei for their most willing co-operation and stimulating companionship that they offered during the course of this study. The ready help in xeroxing of the published articles by Sri. Shekhar Sircar, Sri. S.K. Mallik, Sri. Deepayan and Sri. N. Akbar all from C.D.R.I. is gratefully acknowledged. My special thanks to Sri. Vishun Kumar and Sri. Ved Prakash for sorting the Journals and Books in the Departmental Library of the Department of Statistics, Lucknow University.

To my parents, wife and son I have no words to express my gratitude for providing unstinted support, encouragement and solace while carrying out these studies.
