ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I place this work of inspiration, solely willed and desired by my Master as a humble offering at His divine Lotus Feet. I Surrender this manifested work on your gracious lap with extreme gratitude and love. Thank you, Mother Sai! for being the light which illuminated this whole journey. You have been my friend, my philosopher and my guide, long before this journey and more intensely during this journey. If not for your inspiration, this work would have remained a mere clay. You subjected me to the Potter’s wheel and shaped me and this work to Your utmost desire and Will. Hold my hand, and lead me on in the coming walks of life! I thank my Parents, for being the source of encouragement and motivation for me. Thank you for having introduced me to the joy of reading, which made me embark my quest into literature. Thank you for being patient with me and having bestowed the faith upon me, that the end of this quest is just a few steps away. I thank Late Prof. R. Sunadaram and Prof. Jayanthi Sundaram, for having inspired me to take up this philosophy as a part of my research. You planted the seed of this idea in my mind. Thank you for introducing me to Albert Camus and his perspective towards life, which has stimulated my life as well.

I thank my institution, Central University of Rajasthan for having provided me the space to discover myself and for having given the necessary research atmosphere required for the completion of my research. I humbly pay my gratitude to the Vice Chancellor, Prof. A. K. Pujari, for having been a constant source of inspiration and motivation, for young research scholars like me. I extend my warm gratitude to the Dean School of Humanities and Languages, Dr. N. Lakshmi Aiyar, for being quite supportive and helpful during the time of my research period. Ma’am, you have been with us, with your students, every time in dire need and helped us out from any trouble very neatly. Thank you Ma’am, for standing by me, believing in my potential, and having ignited within me the fire to realize and accomplish the same. I heartily thank the Head of Department, English, Prof. Supriya Agarwal, for having instilled in me immense optimism during times of peril. Ma’am you have been a good listener and helped me stand erect and upright during any rough tide. This work wouldn’t have taken its concrete shape, if not for the ardent dedication of my supervisor, Dr. Bhumika Sharma. Thank you Ma’am, for having led me during this process. Your clarity and your perseverance with me and my work, has been of a great symbol of delight for me. My haphazard thoughts took a shape of coherence whenever I opened my thinking to you. Your sincerity and passion for work, has been a driving force during the process. I extend my deepest love and gratitude to you, Ma’am, for having been this buoyant force, which kept me intact and made me sail through this journey, to its destination. I pay my reverence to my mentor, Dr. Neha Arora, for being the pillar of emotional support for me during my stay on campus. You have been more than just a teacher, perhaps, an elder friend, who has placed immense trust upon me and made me believe in myself. You have been a good listener during my emotional outbursts. Whatever you are, you are His Blessing in my life, who made me believe that God never lets His child walk alone, anywhere. You have been my role model, in profession and in life. Thank you Ma’am, for being ‘you’.

Thank you Vinod Sir, Dr. Vinod K.K., for the lovely debates and discussions we had regarding different aspects of gross concern. My interaction with you has been an enthralling experience and your very being as a lovely individual stays admired.

I thank my teachers Dr. Sanjay Arora, Dr. Devendra Rankawat and Dr. Ved Prakash, for enlightening me with their knowledge and making me more receptive to the varied perspectives of life and literature which surround me.

I am extremely thankful to my writer, Shashi Deshpande, who has been gracious enough to spare time from her busy schedule for an interaction with me. Thank you Ma’am. Your vigour and Zeal for life has fuelled mine as well. My conversation with you made me embrace life more in all its varied forms. You as an individual and through your writings might have graced many lives, and one such is mine.

The pillar of strength, my friend and my conscience, Thokchom Nirmala Devi, you held my hand on the very first day when I entered the portals of this campus, and you have been a pivotal part of my journey and even today. Your ability to keep the self unstirred during times of distress has made me admire you. You have been a witness from the day one of my research, which began as an idea in my mind and till today, when the work has manifested itself finally. The journey has been long, but if not for you, I wouldn’t have kept myself going. This friendship has been a great source of sustenance in the field of research and campus as well. Thanks for being there. Your Presence Matters! Thanks, Irona, Sucheta, Swati and Urvi, for your presence during my days on Campus. You guys have been my stress busters and I extend my heartiest love to all of you, for your friendship, time and presence in my life, which has shaped the positive aura around me. The campus would have been an indifferent one, if not for the subtle presence of you people, who have made me be more of myself. You guys have been my well wishers and your care for me has touched me a lot. Love you all. I extend my heartiest love and gratitude to my friend Praveen, for his presence in my life. You have made a significant difference in my manner of thinking. Your presence has added immense joy and your effort to be in my life is cherished. Thanks for walking beside me, and adding spark in my life during this beautiful journey.

Thanks Manivannan and Ahamed Musfar PM, for being a part of my journey during my campus life! My Deepest love and regards to Prashanthi, Usha and Pummy, for instilling within me confidence and making me able to realize my own capabilities. Your presence has definitely added the necessary fervor to life.

I extend my gratitude to the Central University of Rajasthan Library, Central Institute of English and Foreign languages Library, Hyderabad, Smt. Hansa Mehta Library, The Maharaj Sayajirao University of Baroda and University of Hyderabad Library, for having provided me the necessary aids to facilitate me in the process of my research. I thank Sushil Bhaiya, for his timely help during my last days of research.

Today, when I stand, having crossed the sea, I realize the journey has been more insightful and extremely beautiful more than the end itself. I discovered lost facets of mine and unearthed unknown knowledge of the world within and the world around me.

I surrender my very being to You, Mother Sai!
