ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Confucius once said that the real knowledge is to know the extent of one’s ignorance. Mere possession of information does not make one knowledgeable. True knowledge is the ability to see beyond what is already there and to do so one has to be generously endowed with power of imagination and foresight. This truth dawned on me during the course of this research work!

All through the years of teaching, it seems, I had conveniently taken the concept of Financial Levereg for granted. Then, when I embarked on the journey of learning and discovery I stumbled up on some rare pearls of knowledge that only my guide Dr. H.C Sardar sir could have helped me discover.

I am profoundly grateful and indebted to my guide, Dr. H. C. Sardar sir, for giving me limitless time to question, research, discover and for putting his resources at my disposal before I could even ask for them. He spared time from his busy schedules to solve my queries and guide me whenever and wherever I felt I was losing the way. I am amazed at his ability to solve perplexing issues relating to the ways corporates report financial matters and his unmatched and in-depth knowledge of financial markets. His valuable guidance and intense involvement has made this research work possible. No matter how much I say I still can not thank him enough and who, let me take the liberty of saying is not just my guide but friend and philosopher too.

I thank Dr. V Chari madam, Director, School of Commerce, Gujarat University, for motivating me to undertake this research work and follow it through diligently. I learnt many important aspects of research from her during my M.Phil. I am grateful to her being a figure of inspiration and an epitome of meticulous hard work.

I am extremely grateful to Dr. Kedar Bhatt sir, Director, Rollwalla Computer Centre, Gujarat University, for his extensive guidance in the preparation of this research work.

I am also extremely grateful to Dr. M. N. Patel sir, Associate Professor, Department of Statistics, Gujarat University, who spared valuable time from very busy schedule and solved all my doubts regarding statistical analysis in this research work.

I am extremely grateful to Dr. Saurabh Choksi sir, Director, J.G. Group of Colleges, Ahmedabad who encouraged me for the reseach work and also considerately allowed me time off college to pursue this research work. I thank him from the bottom of my heart. I am also thankful to my colleagues at J.G. College of Commerce.

I am thankful to Dr. M.J.Joshi sir, Principal, Ahmedabad Arts & Commerce College and Dr. V.G Vadhel sir, Principal, M.P.Arts & M.H. Commerce College for being constant source of inspiration and motivation.

I thank staff members at AMA library and IIM library and people at INFLIBNET for being helpful.
Without the emotional and devotional support of my mother and my wife this research work would not have been undertaken in the first place. They have bolstered my efforts in every way possible and have happily tolerated my neglect of social life and put my requirements ahead of their own. All my achievements belong to my mother who has happily sacrificed so much in her life to see me scale even greater heights. This is just a beginning….
