I would like to express my sincerest gratitude to my supervisor Prof. Kapil Kapoor who has patiently suffered me through the years. He has not only guided me through the maze of theoretical debates but has also been a kind friend. He provided me the renewed impetus when I let go, he gently prodded me on when I failed to deliver, and encouraged me in moments of crises. I have had the previlege of being his student for the last several years. During this long association, I have found in him a rare combination of scholarship, erudition and humour. His class lectures have been a veritable treat. The clarity of his argument and the discipline of his subject have always inspired me. He is the perfect embodiment of 'Vidya dadati Vinayam'. I have been the recipient of his magnanimity and caring nature. Sir, I shall remain forever indebted, you have taught me how to be a great human being besides being a thorough academic researcher.

My acknowledgements are due to my husband who has always shared his achievements with me and now it is my turn to reciprocate. He has been like a rock on which I could anchor upon and keep my faith alive. I am grateful to him for having performed so many roles from that of a proofreader to a sounding board to a blame taker. Numerous thanks are also due to him for having run around depositing and collecting drafts from the typist, for having made me computer savvy, for having sponsored my visits to the FTII and NFAI library Pune and ASRC library Hyderabad. I thank him for being always around in this lonely endeavor of thesis writing and for having told me that I could do it. Tapas, please be around for several other innings.

One can never thank one’s parents enough and most of the times it seems like an exercise in futility for where does one begin and where does one end. A ‘thank you’ seems so inadequate a word. Should one thank them for having taught those first alphabets, which was first and most important step towards acquiring knowledge or should they be thanked for having prioritized gaining knowledge over all other needs of life. Should one thank them for expanding one’s intellectual horizons by turning it into a spiritual quest or should they be thanked for having kept my faith alive in academics in a world where materialistic achievements decides one’s career. Ma and Papuji (Bani and Ashim Mukherji) I know you have always believed in me and today I am lucky that I could fulfil at least one of your dreams.

I must acknowledge my gratitude to my other set of parents by marriage who have always blessed me with success. They have always applauded my endeavors and prayed that my work bore results. Dr. K.K. Sen and Mrs. Sandhya Sen, God willing, you will soon have another Doctor in the family but not in medicine. Your daughter-in-law is grateful for the encouragement and for having provided a conducive ambience and a congenial working environment.

I extend my gratitude to all the faculty members of Centre of Linguistics and English, (SLLCS) for their warmth, affection and encouragement through my post graduation, M.Phil and my Ph.D. In an ever-changing world, this is one place that refuses to change and provides endless intellectual and emotional sustenance.

I extend my thanks to the entire teaching faculty of FTII Pune for introducing me to the fascinating ‘World of Cinema’ and providing me with a perspective. Thanks for choosing me for the Film Appreciation Course (1992), it expanded my horizons substantially.

I also extend my sincere thanks to all my friends in DDUC, University of Delhi, especially Mr. Pramesh Ratnakar.

I thank Prof. Harish Trivedi and Prof. Malashree Lal, Head of the Department of English, University of Delhi for sanctioning me the study leave.

I must thank Mr. Rawat for having painstakingly guided me through the submission procedure of my thesis. Mr. Rawat thank you for having dusted all the cobwebs to retrieve my old registration cards, your initiative is well appreciated.

I thank Molly for having ensured all my appointments with my supervisor.

I must remember to thank Shailesh Mishra and everyone else at Sanjay Photostat for their untiring work and cooperation. Their friendly nature really made a difference.

And finally thank you God for seeing me through.

Anubha Mukherji
