Bibliography

10. Al-Waili NS, Saloom KS, Al-Waili TN, Al-Waili AN. The safety and efficacy of a

19. Al-Waili N. Glycemic response to glucose and honey in patients with diabetes

23. Al-Waili, N. Intrapulmonary administration of natural honey solution, hyperosmolar dextrose or hypoosmolar distill water to normal individuals and to patients with type 2 diabetes mellitus or hypertension: their effects on blood glucose level, plasma insulin and C-peptide, blood pressure and peaked expiratory flow rate. European Journal of Medical Research 2003; 8(7): 295–303.

26. Azeredo LC, Azeredo MAA, Souza SR, Dutra VML. Protein contents and physicochemical properties in honey samples of Apis mellifera of different floral

52. Chepulis L, Francis E. The glycemic index of Manuka honey. Journal of Clinical Nutrition and Metabolism 2013; 8: e21–e24.

59. Christopher J Adams, Cherie H Boult, Benjamin J Deadman, Judie M Farr, Megan NC Grainger, Merilyn Manley-Harris, Melanie J Snow. Isolation by HPLC and

66. DECODE Study Group, on behalf of the European Diabetes Epidemiology Group. Is the current definition for diabetes relevant to mortality risk from all causes

125. Kiovisto VA. Fructose as a dietary sweetener in diabetes mellitus, Diabetes Care

133. Lazaridou A, Biliaderis CG, Bacandritsos N, Sabatini AG. Composition, thermal and rheological behaviour of selected Greek Honeys. Journal of Food Engineering

143. Majno G. The healing hand: man and wound in the ancient world. Cambridge,

Bibliography

177. Qidwai W, Waheed S, Ayub S, Syed IA. Medicinal uses of honey: Results of a Nursing and Health Science 2012; 1(1): 40–44.

2914–2921.

216. Swanson E, Laine C, Thomas W, Bantle J. Metabolic effects of dietary fructose in

Bibliography

238. WHO. The scientific groups and technical report series 797, Geneva 2000; 360.

Bibliography

251. www.who.int/en. World Health Organisation. Obesity and overweight factsheet N