ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

My heart is filled to the brim while presenting this thesis which would have been impossible without the aid of a large number of individuals.

I thank the people of urban slum and rural area for their hospitality during my stay in the villages. Persons of different religions, castes and political colours were equally kind and helpful to me.

In particular, the first and the foremost, I must make a mention of the guide Dr. Chaudhary, P.N., M.Sc. LL.B. Ph.D., Reader in Nutrition, Department of Home Science, Nagpur University, Nagpur, who through every phase of this work, spared his valuable time to make timely and prompt comments and suggestions and put me on the right track. Without his guidance this work would not have seen the day within the shortest possible time. I am indeed greatly indebted to him for this untiring guidance and inspiring motivation.

I would like to thank Mrs. M.V. Shiralkar, Head of the Department of Home Science, Vidarbha.
Mahavidyalaya, Amravati University, Amravati, for providing all the facilities in the department.

I would like to thank Dr. Mrs. Bijwe, Head of the Department of Home Science, Amravati University, Amravati, for her hearted cooperation in the research work done by me.

I should also express my thanks to the members of the staff of Vidarbha mahavidyalaya, Amravati, library staff of National Institute of Nutrition, Hyderabad, library staff of Dr. Panjabrao Deshmukh Medical College, Amravati, library staff of Anthropological Survey of India, Nagpur, Mr. Kedia, R.G. Lecturer in Department of Statistics, V.M.V., Amravati, Dr. Mrs. Mane, A.G., Lecturer in Department of Home Science, College of Rural Services, Amravati, Dr. Miss. Kherde Sunanda and Dr. Kulkarni, K.M. Lecturer in Department of Zoology, V.M.V., Amravati for their hearted cooperation in the research work done by me.

Mr. Junghare, A.R. who skilfully struck the delicate balance between encouragement, guidance and keeping me on track, he and family members who daily helped me back out of the chasm with patient understanding; to them I cannot adequately express my indebtedness, gratitude and love.

Again, I acknowledge my best thanks to all the persons, without whose active and practical cooperation the present thesis would have been merely a dream.
