P R E F A C E

In the modern society two prominent phenomenon - Stress and coronary diseases are highly prevalent. Several researches are conducted in various disciplines - Social, psychological and medical Science, etc. to study the nature and extent of relationship between coronary diseases and stress.

In view of the foregoing discussion, the present author has attempted to study various factors causing stress and how this state of stress is associated with CHD. In chapter 1 author discusses the various aspects of stress and CHD as per various disciplines. Chapter 2 gives related works done in various fields. Chapter-3 discusses the problem and importance. Chepter-4 gives methodology of present study. Chepter-5 discusses results and its discussion. The last chapter gives brief summary of the present study and concluding remarks alongwith necessary suggestions.

The appendix that follows the text give relevant information.

Ahmedabad. MANSUKH PANCHAL
December, 1989.