REFERENCES

Books

:Allyn&Bacon..p.257

Saunders Company.

Journals

thinking in middle and high school students. Journal of Research in science teaching. 27 (3) 267-285.

using concept maps.* Proc. of the Second Int.Conference on Concept
April 30.2008)

Agarwal, R., & Mishra, K.S.(1988) Effectiveness of reception concept attainment model of teaching for enhancing attainment of science concepts. Indian educational review. 23(2) 130-136

Alder, N.,&McKelvey, S.(2004). Instructional strategies to increase motivation, close achievement gap, and help students to reach their potential. Metropolitan Educational Research Consortium (MERC), Virginia Retrieved on June 2,2008, from http://www.soe.vcu.edu/merc/ALDER%20MCKELVY%20combined.doc.

relation to scholastic performance, cognitive ability, attitude towards concept mapping and science interest among standard IX students .
(Vol:2). New Delhi: NCERT.

importance of reflection in improving science teaching and learning.

laboratory teaching and concept maps to build scientific knowledge and organize concept network teaching experiences in first level education in Italian schools.* Concept Maps: Theory, Methodology, Technology. Proc. Of the Second Int; Conference on Concept Mapping. Canas, A.J., & Novak, J. D.(Eds) San Jose.(accessed on April 30.2008).

North Central Regional Educational Laboratory (NCREL) (1988) Graphic Organizers. www.ncrel.org/sdrs/areas/issues/students/learning/ lr1grorg.htm retrieved on (2-6-08)

Roth, W. M. (1994) Student views of collaborative concept mapping: An emancipatory research project. Science Education 78(1) 1-34.

Trifone, J.D. (2006). The efficacy of concept mapping in motivating students to take a more meaningful approach to learning. (send by Dr. Novak in July, 2006 by e-mail attachment to the researcher).

Sheela Chacko
Research Student

Dr. Seema A. Katre
Research Guide