Acknowledgement

This thesis owes so much and to so many people that it is difficult to single out all who have helped in the writing of it.

A work such as this which spreads over some years, is seldom the result of my sole efforts. Many persons have provided me with advice and support as the study went through its peaks and troughs. This acknowledgement is but a small gesture of gratitude to them.

Some helped me professionally with their time and sagacious advice. To all of them my heartfelt thanks. At the first instance, with deepest regards I thanked my teacher and supervisor, Dr. S.M.A.W. Chishti, Associate Professor, Department of Political Science, Manipur University, Canchipur. I express my profound indebtedness to him for his untiring guidance and valuable advice in letting my thesis saw the light of the day. In spite of his various other pre-occupations, he has kindly spared much of his valuable time. I also express my deep sense of gratitude to Chinglen Maisnam, Assistant Professor, Department of Economics, Manipur University, for his learned guidance and valuable suggestions. I also thank all the teaching and non-teaching staff of the Department of Political Science for helping me out in every possible way. My special thanks also goes to Th. Nabachandra for the pains he took in preparing the type-script with the changes I invariably kept making, was not as easy task.
I also thank the staff and workers of Manipur University Library.

In planning and completing this work, I have drawn help from various sources and wish to acknowledge them with a sense of gratitude and appreciation.

The scholarly work of distinguished authors have been referred in the report. I am grateful to them, some of the tables are drawn from the reports published by the various departments of Government of India and Government of Manipur. I acknowledge them all.

Finally, no such work is quite possible without the emotional support of my family. The major source of encouragement are my parents, sisters and brothers-in-laws who virtually had their aspirations centred on the work.

Views and interpretations put forth in this thesis are my own and I am fully responsible for them.
