OBJECTIVE AND HYPOTHESES
CHAPTER III

OBJECTIVES AND HYPOTHESES

Woman is very important and integral part of every human's life right from the time of birth, every woman whether working or non working in some way or other is special and has a special inherent talent, only difference being that some women get to exhibit their talent and some don't. Working women environment to share responsibilities and to be consistent with others in the group for being efficient. Women have some kind of work on hand to deal with. Evidently due to women's nature, their creation and their ability to communicate emotionally with the family, the responsibility of rearing children assigned to them and moreover. The emotional mature women can live problems, express opinions well, establish and maintain good relationships with others. Their personality is continuously striving for greater sense of emotional health, both intra psychically and intra personally.

Differences in attitudes among working and non working women towards female roles are likely to influence their behavior. Some women work primarily for financial necessity and remain predominantly involved in homemaker roles. Equally some non working women solve frustrations with the domestic routine by involvement in non paid social activities. Recently, there has been considerable change in the traditional roles of Indian women.

With regard to their roles, responsibilities and marital adjustment, marital relationship is the foundation of family life because it involves the union between a man and a woman as husband and wife. Marriage is a component part of the culture usually formalized by the custom, law and occasionally solemnized by religion. It is a means by which physiological, procreational, social, emotional and security needs are satisfied. There is evidence that the multiple roles specially related to their married life are greater. They bear the double burden of housework and a job outside the home. Because they have to work in two environments, one is the office environment. Both are vastly different from one another. Keeping in view the above issues in mind the problem of present study was undertaken to investigate emotional maturity and marital adjustment among working and nonworking married women.
Problem

To study the emotional maturity and marital adjustment of working and non working women.

Objectives-

1. To assess and compare the emotional maturity of working and non working women.
2. To assess and compare the marital adjustment of working and non working women.

Hypotheses-

1. There would be significant difference between working and non working women on emotional maturity.
2. There would be significant difference between working and non working women on marital adjustment.