

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is indeed difficult for me to express in words my heartfelt immense gratitude and sense of indebtedness towards Professor Atmanand, Management Development Institute, Gurgaon for his supervision and guidance on this research study. But for his helping attitude and constant encouragement throughout the period of this work, the study would not have seen the light of the day. I hereby place on record my profound gratitude for his invaluable guidance, constant encouragement, continued interest, persistent and useful suggestions, and moral support. He was the source of inspiration for me for the entire period of study.

I am grateful to Prof Imran Saleem Head and Dean, Faculty of Management Studies and Information Technology, Jamia Hamdard, New Delhi for his guidance and the qualitative enrichment of the thesis. In spite of his busy schedules and tremendous workload, he helped me with his colossal experience and scintillating acumen in his field; that facilitated me to render a successful shape to this project. I am highly indebted to him.

I am extremely thankful to Dr. N. K. Jain, previous co-guide, for his valuable suggestions in the initial stages. I hereby place on record my sincere gratitude to him.

Keeping in view the magnitude and nature of the study, the field investigation was the critical and indispensable element, which would not have been possible without the unstinted support of Dr Madhab Nayak and Ms Veena Sharma of FODRA. They took pains and interest, extended their cooperation during the data collection whenever required. I also wish to record my sincere thanks to both of them.

I hereby acknowledge with heartfelt gratitude to all the community workers, who were very helpful in administrating the questionnaires with the community women and also rendered their valuable suggestions during pilot testing of the tools from time to time during the study.

I also express my personal thanks to all the women who graciously spared their time and helped me in gathering the data for the study and responded patiently to furnish the information which included information about their personal and family lives. They are so many that it is difficult for me to individually acknowledge my gratitude in person. My thanks are also due to those, who directly or indirectly helped me from time to time in carrying out this work.

Last but not least I would like to convey my special thanks to my children for their constant moral support to whom I could not give enough time due to pre-occupation of my research work and yet they were constant source of support and encouragement.
