ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am grateful to the Government of Maharashtra and the Government of India for permitting me to undertake the study for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Marketing Management in Forestry. The opportunity and stimulus for such a study were offered to me after my posting at Ahmedabad as a Member of the Faculty of the proposed Indian Institute of Forest Management. A Forestry Group was formed in May 1978 at Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad, under the collaborative arrangements of the Government of India with the IIM. This opened up an unparalleled opportunity in the field of academic world for a service careerist like me. The inter-actions with the members of Faculty of IIM Ahmedabad created a new perspective for me in forestry profession. It also brought me in contact with some of the eminent academicians in the field of Management, outside the Forestry Group. I could not have asked for a better opportunity than the one I was thus fortunate to secure. My gratitude, therefore, has no bounds.

I am sincerely grateful to the Gujarat University for having considered me worthy of admission to its Ph D Programme. I am equally grateful to the BK School of Business Management, Gujarat University, Ahmedabad, for facilitating my admission.

I owe a great indebtedness to Dr MP Kacker, Director, BK School of Business Management, who very kindly consented to become my Guide for this study. But for his initiative and constant encouragement, my effort would not have succeeded. His patient and unhesitating guidance, particularly when I found myself at loss and uncertain to proceed, cannot be valued in mere words.
Many of my learning efforts were encouraged and helped by Prof Subhash C Mehta of IIM Ahmedabad. Our active collaboration since 1978 in the Forestry Group for creating teaching materials for the Indian Institute of Forest Management and also in some special studies, offered me an excellent chance to learn through association with him. Words are inadequate to express my debt to Prof Mehta.

I record my thanks to the Programme Officer, Indian Institute of Forest Management, Government of India, Ahmedabad for allowing me to make use of all the cases and reports prepared by the Forestry Group, for this study.

Such an effort, mainly in my spare time, necessarily encroached on my time at home and on the patience of my family. My wife Neela, particularly had to bear the brunt. In my official capacity, I was always busy in office and undertook extensive tours. Whenever I remained home, I dug myself into books. But for my wife’s considerate attitude and constant encouragement, this study could not have been possible. My sons Rahul and Atul also helped without hesitation and always maintained a cheerful home. I owe them a lot.

Mr S Ranganathan typed the manuscript. He also handled procurement and return of library material. He looked after correspondence and payment of fees, etc with the University. Mr T Sreedharan also helped in typing as well as in giving final shape to the write up. They did this in their spare time. Both deserve my sincere appreciation for hard work and quality.

I thank all my colleagues and staff in my office, who cheerfully put up with me during this period of enhanced activity.
