ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First and foremost, I offer my profound thanks to God from whom all blessings flow, especially for the valuable treasure -- the Bible. While analysing the theme of liberation in this Book of books, God had granted me His grace to ponder over His great mercies, imbibed in me a deeper faith in the Word of God and given me inspiring insights into His immeasurable love.

I wish to thank the Vice-Chancellor, Manonmaniam Sundaranar University for allowing me to register for a Ph.D. Programme.

I am greatly indebted to my esteemed Research Guide, Dr. M.K. Sripathi, M.A., Ph.D., D.Litt, Dean, (Retd.) Madurai Kamaraj University, for his valuable guidance given at every stage of my study and research. His wide scholarship, mastery of the English Language, genuine love for literature and scholarly approach to any subject have opened for me new vistas of learning. His meticulous care over the most minute details, commitment to perfection have added a new dimension to the pursuit of my study and research. His inspiring guidance, constant encouragement and kind hospitality were all pleasant privileges I had during my research work, making it throughout a most invigorating and rewarding exercise.

I am grateful to my dear parents, Mrs. Freda Muller and Mr. D.S. George Muller, M.A., for their continuous support and encouragement. They have instilled in me a love for the Bible and have helped me in a systematic study of it. I express my gratitude especially to my father for creating in me a love for the beauties of the English language and literature. This happy blend of my love for the Word of God and Literature has enabled me to present the fruits of my study in this Dissertation.
I place on record my thanks to the Staff of the American Studies Research Centre, Hyderabad; Librarians of the United Theological College, Bangalore; Gurukal Theological Seminary, Madras; Tamil Nadu Theological Seminary, Arasaradi, Madurai; and Bishop Stephen Neill Study and Research Centre, Palayankottai, for their help given me in the collection of necessary secondary source materials.

I remember with gratitude Mrs. Prema S. Nair, M.A., M.L.I.S., Librarian, Sarah Tucker College, Tirunelveli-7, for her ever ready and unfailing help in providing me the materials required from time to time.

I thank Rev. Stephen Lionel for lending me many valuable books bearing on the subject of my research.

I should mention with gratitude the patient and unstinted help and steady support extended to me by my husband, Mr. D. Thangaraj, M.A., M.Phil., of St. John’s College, during my preparation of this Dissertation.

I owe my sincere thanks to Kautilya Computers, Tirunelveli Junction, for their neat and prompt execution of the text of this thesis.
