From the core of my heart I feel that it is my duty to express my gratitude at the very outset for the co-operation and help I received for the completion of the work. My debts of gratitude are many.

At first I owe my extreme gratitude to my supervisor cum teacher Dr Soumyendra Kishore Dutta, Head, Department of Economics, University of Burdwan without the continuous and active guidance of whom it was not possible for me to complete the study in this present form.

I would also like to express my deep sense of gratitude to my teacher Prof. Goutam Sarkar of University of Burdwan who paid a great attention to my work from the very beginning and gave invaluable suggestions regarding my study.

I also wish to express my sincere gratitude to Prof. M. Chattopadhyay and Prof. D. Coondoo of Economic Research Unit, ISI, Calcutta, for the interest they have shown in my work and the valuable suggestions they gave.

I am grateful to Additional Director of Evaluation Wing, Directorate of Agriculture, Government of West Bengal for his kind cooperation in the collection of Data.

My indebtedness is also due to Mr. Tapan kumar Sharma Sarkar, of Evaluation Wing, Directorate of Agriculture, Government of West Bengal for his extended support in getting various government publications.

I am also indebted to Mr. Dulal Chatterjee, Santanu Banerjee of Department of Minor Irrigation, Government of West Bengal for their assistance in providing me access to official documents.

I would like to put on record my acknowledgement of the help I got from the office of the District Statistical Officer, Burdwan; Bureau of Applied Economics and Statistics, Government of West Bengal, Calcutta; Commercial Library, Calcutta; Central Library of University of Burdwan and Library of ISI, Calcutta.
I also owe my gratitude to my colleagues for their kind co-operation and encouragement, especially to Prof. M. Dasgupta of Tripura University for going through some of my manuscripts and providing valuable suggestions.

I am also very much indebted to my teachers of University of Burdwan who have taught me the subject and encouraged my efforts.

I wish to acknowledge my sincere thanks to the members of computer centre of Tripura University, Mr. S. Debbarma, Mr. M. K. Debbarma and Mr. Shyamal Saha who helped me in different ways at the time of processing of data and composition of work.

My sincere gratitude is also due to Tripura University and U. G. C. for providing me a Minor Research Project that was too helpful for conducting my study.

However I would like to take the whole responsibility for any error remaining in my study.

The last but not the least I wish to mention my parents who were the major source of inspiration in all times.
