ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

At the very outset, I would like to express my deep gratitude and great indebtedness to Professor Helen Giri who was then the Head of the Centre when I started my research work. During the last year of her headship, she also acted as my supervisor till the day of her retirement in 2004. She has been a real source of inspiration and encouragement in the pursuance of my Ph. D research work. She has in fact, infused into my mind the idea of doing research, and kept on reminding me day after day that I should pursue my research in the field of music. Her persistent reminder kept on pondering in my mind till one fine day, I finally took up the decision, started the work, and now I have come to its completion.

In carrying out this work, I owe a profound debt of heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Lapynshai Syiem under whose able supervision and guidance I have been able to work for my Ph.D. Her patience and ability to guide and supervise every stage of my work has led to the smooth sailing and timely completion of my research. I am also immensely thankful to my Joint Supervisor Dr. Pascal Malngiang who has so generously spent his time and took pain to guide and examine every part of my work, particularly the technical and musical part of it.

I must acknowledge with gratitude the kind help and assistances of two persons who spared no efforts in giving me their helping hand whenever I needed their help. I am particularly indebted to Fabian Dkhar, L.D.C and computer operator of the Centre, who has offered his kind service in doing all typing and computer work involved, and in giving a final shape to the work. Another person who deserves special mention here is Alfred Rapthap for having inserted all the western music staff notations in relevant portions of the chapters.

I am deeply thankful to the various scholars, senior persons, church elders, pastors, priests, music experts and others, for their generous help both in providing me with books, reading materials, responses to questionnaires, and through interviews, discussions and suggestions which have given substance and enrichment to my work. Among them, I am indebted to Fr. Jacob Aluckal who was so prompt to provide me with all the materials and information related to the study; Fr. John Madur for being kind enough to supply the statistical information that I needed; Fr. J. Shylla for his books and dictionaries; B. Shylla, NEHU Publication Cell for helping me with the translations; Bro. Valeri and his computer operator Mr. Alex of Don Bosco Printing Press for providing me the relevant maps; W.R. Laitflang a Presbyterian Church elder; C.R. Cajee church pastor; Dr. Rabindra Sharma research associate NEHU; W.D. Jyrwa a Khasi composer and songwriter, and S. Diengdoh, computer operator, NEHU publication Cell.

I acknowledge all those writers whose books I have consulted and quoted. My sincere acknowledgement also goes to the NEHU Central Library, the Sacred Heart Theological College Library, the State Central Library and Christ King College Library for their kind permission to have access to their libraries, and all the respondents who have been so kind to respond to my questionnaires that have greatly contributed to the enrichment of the work.
I extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to all the members of the teaching faculty with due mention of Dr. D.L. Kharmawphlang my previous head, Dr. P. Jhingan my present head and all the non-teaching staff of the Centre for Cultural & Creative Studies, NEHU, for their inspiration, encouragement, understanding and support rendered throughout my research term.

Over and above, I wish to dedicate the success of this work to my family, particularly my wife and my three daughters who have sincerely given me all the help, support, understanding, cooperation and patience all through these years, through which this work was accomplished in time.

Last but not the least, my sincere thanks also goes to all those whose names I cannot mention here individually, but whose generous help and support, direct and indirect have tremendously contributed towards the successful accomplishment of my work.

November, 2008.
