I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation:

to my guide, Dr V. Venkata Rao, B.A.(Hons.), M.A., M.Litt., Ph.D., D.Litt., Professor and Head of the Department of Political Science and ex-Dean, Faculty of Arts, Gauhati University, whose guidance and encouragement have contributed to the completion of this thesis;

to the Librarians and staff of British Museum, London; India Office Library, London; School of Oriental and African Studies, London; Commonwealth Institute, London; University of London Institute of Education; Gauhati University Library; Cotton College Library, Gauhati; Assam Assembly Library and District Library, Shillong; National Library, Calcutta; whose ungrudging help and co-operation proved invaluable in finding out materials for my study; to the Director of Historical and Antiquarian Studies, Gauhati, for all the help extended to me in finding out rare documents and records; to the Keeper of Records, Assam Secretariat (Civil), Shillong, for allowing me to examine the files and records relevant to my study in the Records Room; and, to all those who helped me in the completion of this thesis.

Gauhati University,
