ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I deem it a privilege that I had the opportunity to work under the supervision and expert guidance of Professor G.C. Goswami. I express my profoundest gratitude to him for all the help, encouragement and generosity I have received from him in completing this thesis.

I owe a particular debt of gratitude to Professor R.K. Sprigg who very graciously granted me two interviews, went through some parts of this thesis, made some very perceptive comments and offered some very constructive suggestions for improvement. I must thank Professor R.H. Robins of the School of Oriental an African Studies, London, for sending me some very useful source material. It was indeed he who introduced me to Professor R.K. Sprigg.

My grateful thanks are due to Dr. D.P. Pattanayak, Director of the Central Institute of Indian Languages, Mysore who was kind enough to permit me to use the language laboratory of the Institute. I would like to express my sense of obligation to Dr. B.B. Purohit of the Central Institute of Indian Languages, Mysore who helped me in making an instrumental study of Manipuri tones.

I wish to express my gratitude to Mr. L. Ramiah, Librarian, Central Institute of English and Foreign Language,
Hyderabad, who extended to me all the facilities available in the Library. I have relied heavily upon published work in the field of contrastive linguistics and I gratefully acknowledge the information and enlightenment I have received from them. My thanks are due to my informants for their kind co-operation in the experimental procedure followed in this thesis.

My grateful thanks go to Mr. H. Herachandra Singh who typed this difficult thesis ungrudgingly and with great patience.

I must place on record my mother's blessings, the sustained encouragement and help I have received from my wife and children.
