ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The ocean of knowledge is vast, but every droplet has been equally important in turning it into this enormous, immeasurable element of magnificence that never ceases to swell and constantly envelope everything around us. This doctoral thesis, like others, signals the culmination, not only of a deluge of thoughts, and ideas, but mostly of a torrent of unending and unwavering support and inputs from a host of people and institutions. One of the great joys of completing this thesis is that it gives me an opportunity to look over the journey past and express my deepest sense of gratitude to all those who have been beacons along this long but fulfilling road.

My first debt of gratitude goes out to my Research Guide, Dr. H.S. Ashok, Reader, Department of Psychology, Bangalore University. उत्तिष्ठ जाग्रत प्राप्य वरान्निबोधत (uttīṣṭha jāgrata prāpya varānnibodhata) goes a famous Sanskrit Verse, which means, “Arise, Awake, and learn by approaching excellent teachers”, and it has been his patient, steadfast and untiring motivation and inputs that has led me here. His unflinching support and conviction will always inspire me, and I hope to continue to work with his noble thoughts. I cannot thank him enough.

I would also like to thank Dr. G. Mohan Kumar, Former Chairman, Department of Psychology, Bangalore University, who passed on invaluable inputs from his experience and wisdom in the initial days of my research.

At the same time, I would like to express my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. R. Gopala Krishna, Chairman, Department of Psychology, Bangalore University, who has been a steady source of support, and for his valuable advice, constructive criticism and his extensive discussions around my work, throughout the entire duration of my research.

I also would like to convey my thankfulness to Dr. Srinivas M, Assistant professor, Department of Psychology, Bangalore University who extended his warm support and motivated me during the course of my entire research.

For the successful outcome of any research, every single piece of data collected plays an important and invaluable role, and I would express my sincere and utmost gratitude to Sri G.M. Hegade, Manager HRD Bengaluru Metropolitan Transport Corporation, Sri S. T. Nagaraj, the then Personal Assistant to the Transport Minister, Government of Karnataka, Sri E.V. Satyanarayana then Editor, Prajavani, Mr. Arun the then editor, Indian Express, Sri Du.Gu.Laxmana, editor Vikrama weekly and Smt. B.K. Kiranmayi, Editor, Yojana Kannada and Dr. Ashok Kumar, former Chairman, Department of Electronic Media, Bangalore University for introducing me through to the participants of my study, therefore smoothening the process of this doctoral research.
At the same time, I am extremely indebted to all the Women Conductors and Women Mechanics of Bengaluru Metropolitan Transport Corporation, Journalists, Nurses and Call Centre Employees who were the participants of this doctoral study. Without their cooperation and meticulous answering of the questions posed to them, this research would have been a futile exercise, and any amount of my regards to them is less, because of their stupendous and precious contribution to this doctoral study.

Information forms the backbone of any study, and libraries with their enormous volumes of knowledge contribute immensely to any form of research. In this regard, I would like to thank the Management and Library Staff of the Libraries of Bangalore University, National Institute of Mental Health and Neurosciences, Bangalore, and Department of Management Studies, Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore, for making available to me all the required titles which have ably guided me throughout the course of formulating this doctoral thesis.

Any acknowledgement would be incomplete without the mention of my family, who have been the guiding force behind this journey, and have propelled me here. I have no words in my repertoire to describe the support that my husband, Sri S. Shivananda, my son Sammith and my daughter Samarchitha have lent me during the entire course of this doctoral study. Their love, affection and understanding is what has brought me here, and without their cooperation this study would have been an impossible task.

At this juncture, I would also like to thank all my friends, well-wishers and non-teaching staff of Department of Psychology, Bangalore University for their direct and indirect support and words of encouragement throughout my journey in this regard.
Last but not the least, my highest sense of gratitude goes out to the omniscient, omnipresent and the omnipotent Almighty to whom, I cannot thank enough, but only bow my head in deepest reverence and humility Who has enabled me to complete this doctoral thesis.

Thank you all,

Rohini Shivananda
