Acknowledgements

I express deep sense of gratitude and whole hearted thanks to Dr. N. M. Shah, my Guide, an enthusiastic young man of 69 years, for guiding this research work. He is a visiting faculty to the Department of Management studies and Research Smt. L.R.T. College of Commerce, Akola. His keen interest, guidance and encouragement had been the driving force behind me throughout the course of this work. I also have the same depth of gratitude to Dr. S. C. Bhandari, Professor, Smt. L.R.T. College of commerce, Akola, who has not only for his guidance on the research work but also for his personal persuasion to me for completing the work. I thank Prof. S. C. Chapke, Principal and other faculties of the Department of Management Studies and Research, Smt. L.R.T. College of commerce, Akola, for their necessary support and guidance wherever needed in my work.

My hearty thanks to Shri S.B. Date, the then Asstt. General Manager, Bank of Maharashtra, Akola Region, Shri A. A. Apte, Ex Regional Manager, Bank of Maharashtra, Akola Region for their helpful guidance on the subject matter of the project work. I also thank to different union activists/ leaders working in Akola city specially Shri V. G. Gokhale, the then General Secretary, Bank of Maharashtra Employees Association and Shri P. G. Shegokar the leadership of National Organization of Bank Workers and B.M.S. for the meaningful discussions, I had with them on the subject matter of this work.
During this research work I have contacted many employees of the public sector banks in the Akola District, the leaders of the trade unions functioning in the public sector banks in the Akola District and also the Managers of the Banks, personally on phone, or by some other mode. All of them have extended full cooperation to me in the work by devoting their valuable time and having free and frank discussions on the subject matter. Though I wish so yet it is not possible to make a mention of all such individual names here. I thank them all for the cooperation extended to me. During these years I had opportunity to attend many conferences, meetings and seminars of the trade unions functioning in the public sector banks and also to have informal interactions with leaders such as Shri M. B. Shingrup, Shri A.S.Wakode, Shri R.P.Telgote, Shri. A. M. Khandekar, Shri. D. M. Choudhary, which has enriched me. I thank them all. My special thanks to Shri. P. N. Deshpande, General Secretary and Officers’ Director on the Board of Bank of Maharashtra, a public sector bank for giving special appointment for discussion on the topic. I could get much insight on the subject matter out of his views. I thank Shri D. B. Deshmukh, District Coordinator, Bank of Maharashtra, Akola District not only for the guidance I received from him but also for the statistical data made available to me.

I must mention about the support my family members have given to me even at the cost of inconveniences to them. My wife Mrs. Mangal has shown strong desire that I should complete this research work and supported me to the full extent without any expectation of thanks. My daughters Ku. Sharda, Ku. Laxmi and my son Chi. Aadeesh have always wished to help in some or the other possible ways. I specially mention that the entire computerized setting of this presentation is done by my son, Chi. Aadeesh who is a student of just ninth standard. I do not have words to thank them.
The blessings of my parents, Shri Vinayakrao and late Smt Sindhutai is a special mention, without which I would not have been able to move even a step ahead.

Sincere thanks to all those persons who are directly or indirectly contributed in the completion of this work. I am also thankful to Good Luck Computer, Akola for neat and timely printing of this work.
