ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Research cannot be completed by an individual effort it requires co-operation and timely assistance of many people. It’s my duty to place on record those people who guided, assisted and encouraged in this prolonged process.

First among the big list to whom I owe my gratitude is my research guide Dr. S.T. Bagalkoti, Professor, Dept. of P.G. Studies and Research in Economics, Karnataka University, Dharwad. Without his co-operation, proper guidance this work could not be completed. Without his analytical clarity, sober checks and comments the work would not have been accomplished.

Special thanks to Dr. P.S. Mundinamani who not only encouraged me to keep the track and assisted to contact respondents. I shouldn’t forget to pay special thanks to Dr. R.R. Biradar whom I repeatedly consulted for my quantitative technique problems and he finally directed me to the source where I received the answers for my questions.

Getting respondents was the main problem faced and so many known and unknown friends helped me to overcome this hurdle. I must be grateful to Software employees namely, Mr. Uday Mundinamani, Mr. Chinta Madhu, my friend Varsha Hardikar, Satish Tegginmath and Mahantesh Kadayyanamath.

I thank the authorities of the Centre for Multi Disciplinary Research, Dharwad who allowed me to attend to the Research Methodology Course through which my doubts regarding the application of quantitative techniques got clarified. I must thank Dr. Rajesh Raj of CMDR and the resource persons of the course Dr. Asha Latha, Dr. Manish Kathuria of IIT Bombay and Dr. Lalit Achoth.

Karnatak University Library, Dharwad and V.V. Giri National Labour Institute, Noida, New Delhi and National Institute for Advanced Studies, Bangalore needs to be remembered for their rich literature based on which secondary information was gathered.

I must thank my husband Dr. Kiran P. Kolkar and brothers Dr. S. Chandrashekhar, Partha, Devaraj, Srinivas, Praveen, Pramod and Pavan for their due assistance in data collection.
