ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to place on record, my gratitude to all those (too numerous to be named) who helped me in the course of my research. Above all, I would like to acknowledge my debt of gratitude to the following:

Dr. Vanamala Viswanatha, Lecturer in English, Bangalore University, for finding time to be a friend, philosopher and guide, inspite of an extremely demanding schedule both at home and at work.

The Head of the Department and the Faculty of English, Bangalore University for their encouragement and help throughout the year.

Dr. S. Ramaswamy, for opening my eyes to the infinite possibilities of drama.

Dr. Vimala Rama Rao, Reader in English, Bangalore University for her meticulous introduction to research methodology.

Dr.(Sr.) M. Genevieve, Principal, Mount Carmel College, for her untiring support and prayers.

Mrs. Prema Karanth and Mr. B.V. Karanth, for their generosity in giving me so much of their time and free access to their invaluable collection of books on drama.

Other friends from the world of theatre and education, who shared their experience and insight and are listed after the bibliography.

The staff of the Bangalore British Council, for their unstinted help and support.

Mr. T.K. Chandramouli, for the impeccable presentation of this dissertation.

The teachers and students of the seven colleges surveyed, for patiently and painstakingly filling up the questionnaires and sharing their insight.

My family, for putting up with my vagaries during the last year.

My colleagues in the Department of English, Mount Carmel College for shouldering the additional burden of my cl.

And last, but not least, my students, whose enthusiasm and desire to participate in the learning process was the true inspiration behind this research.
