ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This Thesis is the product of my research over a period of several years. Whatever might be the anxious and agonising moments I may have been through while working on this Dissertation, I now feel relieved and, more importantly, excited when I think I can now place on record my praise, affection, love and regards for those who have enabled me to complete this work.

First and foremost, I would like to express my most sincere and heartfelt thanks and gratitude to Dr. S.S. Visweswaraiah, Professor and Dean, Department of Studies in Law, Karnatak University, Dharwad for the inimitable guidance given, understanding shown and encouragement extended while writing this Thesis. I honestly feel that words do fail to express my real feelings for the above Professor.

I am thankful to the Post-Graduate Students of Law for their keen interest they exhibited in discussing the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act while I was giving them a course on Resolution of Industrial Conflicts during 1998-99.

The Library staff have been quite co-operative and helpful. I thank them sincerely and warm-heartedly.
Shri. S.L. Bagi, Department of Studies in Law, Karnataka University, Dharwad has taken great pains to type my manuscripts so beautifully. I owe my sincere thanks to him.

Lastly but not the least, my dream would not have come true without the love, encouragement and support of the members of my family at crucial moments. To them, I can only say: Thanks a lot for everything! More importantly, the unblemished affection showered upon me by my beloved pets has always been a morale booster to me. So, my dearest Pets, thank you all, much, very, very much.
